

JNU Campus Tour

27 December, Sunday, was when some of the GTPN members took part in JNU campus tour organized by Chukila around 3pm in evening. After relishing on the hot pakoras and kadak chai the tour commenced with about 7 members, including two JNU students. As known for its spacious campus, JNU was very huge to cover the entire area on foot. But with sheer excitement we managed to cover some important areas.

The sites covered during the tour were within the vicinity of ring road, indigenous ring road of JNU and much better than actual one, encircled some important sites of JNU. The road flanked with greeneries led us to hostels, administrative blocks, guest house, schools for different courses, and library. Chukila showed her lecture room having round table conference set up for interactive sessions during the classes. The buildings had amazing graffiti sending messages or slogans and also as known for political activities, the parties had their insignias all over. Surprisingly all the hostels were named after the rivers of India like Tapti, Sabarmati, Jhelum and many more. However with the early winter sunset the other areas of JNU were not visited.

The tour concluded with another round of tea at the popular tea stall near Sabarmati hostel when GTPN updates were provided and brief discussions on the international GTPN day took place. Over all, the event was very enriching with knowing JNU in actual.
